

Tiger's Tale

By Wolfkin

Tiger lived with his mother when he was a little cub. He was a big, big, big, big animal in the forest, so big just under his mother. Everyone in the forest was afraid of him because of his sharp teeth and because of his mother, the king of the forest.

One day, Tiger's mother told tiger to go away. She said, "It's time for you to go away."

Tiger was shocked. He had never thought about leaving mother before. "Don't, mum. I want to stay with you." Tiger said.

"Yes, you had to." said his mother, "you must go away."

"But I love you, mum." Beg Tiger, "I love you, I can't live without you. Please don't send me away."

"That's the point, my son. You must leave here today." His mother said firmly.

“Mum, mum, I want to stay.” Tiger began to roll in the grass.

“Get up! You pinhead! I don’t love you anymore. You must get out of my field. Right now! Go away, get lost!” his mother growled.

Tiger was very sad but he also got hurt. He was too pride as a tiger the son of a king to hear such a mean word.

With a sigh, Tiger turned away, heading for the next forest.

Tiger went into the next forest.

He met the old king there. He fought against the old tiger.

He won and he stayed. He became the king of the next forest.

The years went by, Tiger lived alone.

Then one day, he met his lover in the river. He married her. Soon they got two little baby cubs. They lived a very happy life together.

Day by day, the cubs grew into young tigers. One day morning, Tiger thought back his mother.

After breakfast, Tiger told his sons to leave his field. All his children didn't want to leave. They beg, they rolled, they cried.

So Tiger growled just like his mother.

Tiger hurt his sons. They went away without a backward glance.

Tiger signed, "You all will be kings if you fight for yourselves. But if you stay with me, you are only my sons."

The day, Tiger went to visit his mother. He couldn't find his mother. He just met a young tiger at an age of his son. He knew the young tiger had beaten his mother and became a king of the forest.

THE END

My tutor told me the story when my mom was not at home. I can't understand why the tiger mother sent his son away. If she didn't, her son would fight for her when the young tiger came.

But my tutor told me that if Tiger stay with mother, he wouldn't grow up. Then he couldn't fight for her mother either.

What a sad story! I don't like it.

But I do like tiger. Tiger is very brave. He is the king of forest.

I share the story with you now. What are you thinking about the story?

Tell me.
